

Allison McDowell with Catherine Austin Fitts

They think they can engineer all the humans, with rare exception, into a poverty status, where they have complete control. That gives them the ability to extract all the wealth and radically increase their life expectancy without it making a mess in the general population.

They are looking for complete control.

Note: Vaccine Passports and the preceding behavior control mandates; universal jabs with endless boosters, even for very young children who are 107 times more likely to die from the jab, masking the healthy global population, distancing, contact tracing and more, are the fear generated False Flag created to herd humanity into the emerging global financial control net.

CAF: A venture capitalist explained to me, look, we're not going to humans anymore. We're going to do everything with AI software and robotics. We don't need humans, anymore.

AM: One is the Social Impact Markets. [see Weaponizing Blockchain-Profiting on Human Suffering] I think they are trying to use them both to power this new system, to catalyze this new transhumanism . . .

CAF: They are not sure exactly which way it's going to go, and they're going to manage the process into robotics so that the humans teach the robots and they optimize within the system. In other words, they are going to prototype pure robots versus cyborgs, versus humans—you know, what's better for what? They are optimizers, so they want as much juice out of it as possible. But, one of the things they know, given technology; they think they can basically engineer all the humans, with rare exception, into a poverty status, where they have complete control. That gives them the ability to extract all the wealth and radically increase their life expectancy without it making a mess in the general population. So, they are looking for complete control.

AM: Yes. I know. I keep trying to think, imagine that they are out of the system? They bought their island or their wilderness preserve, you know . . . Unless you're going to live underground somewhere, I just don't see how they think that they're going to be totally out of it because they are weaponizing the entire atmosphere.

CAF: I think part of it is that the technology is a little bit out of control. The other thing is, these are people have a lot to fear at this point. They are very afraid of the general population.

Let me give you a perfect example. I've spent a lot of time tracking money missing from the US Government and violations of the law in financial management. So, you mentioned David Rubenstein and the Council for Foreign Relations. If you look at the 21 trillion that went missing from fiscal 1998, to fiscal 2015,--now it's up to 100 trillion, believe it or not—The players who are on the Council for Foreign Relations; they are institutions. They are banks and the Carlyle Group. Certainly the banks, but it appears the Carlyle Group as well, were intimately involved in shifting that money.

**The Carlyle Group is an American multinational private equity, alternative asset management and financial services corporation. It specializes in private equity, real assets, and private credit.*

AM: Yes.

CAF: If one set of players gets to steal 21 trillion from the other set of players, that's enormous advantage, and you have a lot to be afraid of. Because when you start pulling pension funds and retirement benefits on people, they might want their money back, because it's documented, OK. And, it's documented who the banks were. Under the law, the New York Fed and its member banks have legal responsibility for any illegal transactions and any costs to the citizens of those illegal transactions. So, there's tremendous legal liability here if people start to connect the dots and act.

AM: Within this transhumanist shift and the framing that has unfolded as a national security threat around health pandemic, recurrent and ongoing pandemic, is that if you try to assert one's own rights and choice about how you control your body, then you become framed as an enemy of the state. Increasingly, people will start to realize, like as more and more of these happen, wait a minute. My rights are being compromised. My ability, especially as the spatial web happens, as the QR codes . . .

They are toying with us right now, but it will start to get tighter and tighter. Then more people will push back. But, I think the level of incarceration of digital control system, the punitive measures can be reframed, so you don't really have access to the courts if you've been framed in the way that they'd like to frame people. So, it's this balancing act for them.

CAF: Yes.

AM: How do we create a narrative that allows this to make sense—something that by all rights shouldn't make sense, to allow people to get their mind around that there are powerful people who imagine humans as livestock, who hold uncontrollable amounts of power that goes back centuries, who are enacting something that seems almost unfathomable.

CAF: Right.

AM: But in seeing it, we could unify to stand against it. Because it is a house of cards. If we actually could have the wherewithal to look at it in a unified manner.

CAF: Right.

AM: I've done a lot of looking to see who comes to work around this doctrine of discovery about domination. Nobody wants to be dominated!

CAF: Right.

AM: There is a system of domination that has happened like through the Roman Empire, to Europe, to the Celts, to the indigenous people of Turtle Island, to Africa. There's this need for domination, and they're targeting children; they are targeting the unborn; they are targeting reproduction—the natural lifecycle of humans.

CAF: Right.

AM: That's a unifier! To me, if you can position this as a sacred engagement that crosses faiths, that crosses geography, that crosses nationalism, that we stand for life, for the perpetuation of non-synthetic life on this planet against a dominating force of sociopathic, finance, military mad scientists, that's a profound narrative that people could get behind. Like we're here because of a logical continuum of where we started as opposed to it [our very nature, which is nature] being an aberration. . .

CAF: Oh, I don't think this is an aberration. We've been governed for 500 hundred years by a central banking warfare model. And, more or less, we're all complicit one way or another in that model.

AM: OK.

CAF: At the top of that model, which is a big mystery—I call the committee that runs the world “Mr. Global”—but it's still a big mystery. . .

AM: The Impact Management Project. That's my answer.

CAF: You have people who believe in slavery, and they do view management of the general population as livestock. There is enough documentation of the history of genocide. You know, genocide has been with us for centuries. It rises and slows down and ebbs, but we have every reason to believe we're staring down the barrel of a serious genocide effort here. I think you're right; we've got to come to a story, not just of what's going on, but what could be. To me, this comes down to; do we want to be humans who resonate with each other and all living beings, or do we want to be captured and resonating with a machine controlled by some invisible force? And that's it!

AM: Yes.

CAF: As a financial person, I also believe this means that humans are going to have to take back the monopoly on managing and running the financial system. One of the reasons we got here is that financial system is extracting a greater and greater portion of the economy in a way that is destructive to life; it's destructive to the environment; it's destructive to the human race, and it's leading us into a completely psychopathic place.

AM: I think that it's the debt finance piece that some people keep saying, oh, capitalism is falling apart. And, I'm saying, no; it's been virtualized. It's going to be virtual commodities; it's going to be digital commodities. They are going to commoditize behaviors and virtualize behavioral compliance. That's what the block chain is going to run.

CAF: The people who believe this don't believe in capitalism; they've never practiced capitalism. The New York Fed member banks practice monopoly and they practice immunity to the law as a legal doctrine in this country. They practice criminal enterprise. Organized crime is not capitalism. So, these people don't believe in capitalism.

AM: I think it's domination. Domination crosses the banking . . . I believe that is also what's coming, given the poverty nature of this agenda, how the spiritual nature is being marketed. Most faith institutions at the top have been hijacked into this program.

CAF: Absolutely.

AM: Not straight up running it, but they are deeply enmeshed.

CAF: Right.

AM: This is not individuals of faith. It is the institutions. It's very likely they are going to block chain religion; they'll start to block chain faith tenets, and it will be in agreement with the smart grid. Yeah! Sorry to you if you have a different faith practice. The only slot for your shelter tonight night is Catholic. That's what you've got; you've got to obey the Catholic block chain. Sorry; that's what it is. You know, a lot of that's coming out of Philly. It goes way back. In Philly, housing is running out of the Catholic Church.

CAF: Yes, I know. In the scheme of running the world in the United States—the US version, Philly was always very, very powerful, both in organized crime and on the Masons side.

AM: Yes, I know.

CAF: When I grew up in Philly, there was the Vatican. And the Arch Diocese was huge. They controlled the unions; they had the truckers; they had transportation; they had some of the cops. The Masons controlled the banks and the law firms, so they kind of controlled City Hall. The Vatican was making inroads. The Jews were smaller, but they sort of out punched their weight and were major players. It's been very interesting. What it looked like in Philadelphia; the Jews and the Masons teamed up, got control of telecommunications—worked very closely with the intelligence agencies, and have tried to shift power from the Vatican.

Look at how the NSA replaced the Confession Box . . . Think of it. The Vatican depended on storefront churches to get their control files. Then they got out punched by the telecom guys. Did you notice, the chairman of the University of Pennsylvania Board of Overseers is from Comcast.

AM: Oh yeah! I know.
